What is Infrared?

Infrared saunas differ from conventional saunas by using infrared wavelengths that emit heat at lower temperatures, but penetrate the body more deeply, whereas steam and rock saunas heat the air surrounding you with humidity and damp heat.

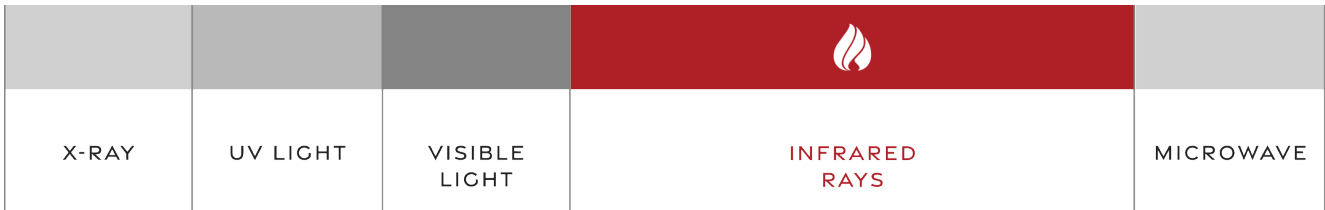

Wavelengths differ, penetrating at varied levels depending on near-, mid- and far-infrared heat.

What is EMF?

Electromagnetic Frequency – invisible energy fields often referred to as radiation, that use man-made lighting produced by electricity; transfer of heat energy using electricity.

EMFs are found in normal everyday appliances and electronics from microwaves to cell phones.

Infrared Saunas are considered safe levels of EMF.

What Our Customers Say

"We own a sweat studio business—we have 5 of the Health Mate saunas and couldn't be happier! All our clients love the roominess & comfort- we have the Therapy Lounge (2) & the Elevated Health Sauna (3) they heat up fairly quickly—clean up is easy—and they are very relaxing and comfortable. I love the Bluetooth feature in each one. They are beautiful so that's a plus!" - Kim S. in Nampa, ID

WE love the built in Bluetooth for listening to relaxing music while we just relax or talk. We would highly recommend the Health Mate for health, relaxation and relationship." - Donald D. in Lexington, KY

ASSEMBLY/SET UP

Your HM sauna generally only requires a basic 120 volt outlet. Larger units may require more.

Each sauna comes easy to assemble and requires no or few tools. You can be enjoying your sauna in under an hour after delivery.

For best outcomes, be sure to place sauna on a stable, even surface (carpet is acceptable) and leave space on all sides for ease of access and placement.

Each sauna comes with a roof vent. Keep this vent closed to reach your desired temperature, and open when done if you wish to air out the sauna after use.
